

ESTIMATE 12,000 MEN JOIN STRIKERS' RANKS AT BETHLEHEM STEEL

Last Hour Conference Fails and Men Leave Their Places

NO DISORDER REPORTED

Report Possibility of General Strike at Youngstown, Ohio

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 12.—(INS)—The far-flung strike against three of the nation's leading steel producers spread today to a fourth, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, second largest steel producer in the nation, as an estimated 12,000 men at its giant Cambria works here joined the ranks of 80,000 already out in seven States.

A last hour conference between company officials and CIO officials failed and at midnight the men filed silently out, to be greeted by cheers from pickets already at the gates. Some of the strikers joined the picket line, others went quietly to their homes, while still others gathered in groups at a distance to watch. There was no disorder.

The walkout was originally called to support the strike called by members of two railroad brotherhoods employed on the Conemaugh and Blacklick Railroad, a company subsidiary, which connects the giant Cambria works, extending for eight miles along the river here, with the Pennsylvania Railroad.

David Watkins, sub-regional director of the CIO's steel workers' organizing committee, now conducting the strike in progress against the Republic Steel Corporation, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, and Inland Steel, said, however: "Our strike tonight is more than a 'sympathy' strike. We have specific demands of our own to make. We want signed contracts with Bethlehem covering wages, hours, recognition, and working conditions."

As the conference between Watkins and company officials ended late last night, Watkins commented shortly:

"The company again refused to sign a contract."

Officials of the plant refused to comment except to say:

"All we can say about the strike is that the mill will continue to run."

Sheriff Michael J. Boyle, of Cambria County, put in a call with the Governor's office for State Police "to assist in maintaining order during the strike."

Indications were seen here that the strike might also spread to include an estimated 2500 men employed at five captive mines operated by the company at Rosedale, Franklin, and Heilwood.

"The United Mine Workers (CIO affiliate) have not signed a contract with Bethlehem's captive mines," commented Watkins. "I don't think that anybody can keep these miners working when there is a strike in the steel mills."

Bethlehem Steel Corporation employs 75,000 men, operating 8 plants in Pennsylvania, three in California, two in New Jersey, two in New York, and one each in Maryland, Delaware, Illinois, and Washington. Its annual tonnage is estimated at 9,260,000 tons.

Preliminary negotiations have been held between minor officials of the company and CIO officials, but executives of the company, headed by Eugene G. Grace, have refused to discuss a contract.

State Officers Pay Visit To Sons of Temperance Here

Bristol Division, No. 107, Sons of Temperance, last night was host to State officers who visited the local organization. There were a number of speeches, a social time and refreshments, which tended to make the evening a very enjoyable one.

Among the visitors were William E. Lewis, G. W. P.; Margaret M. Montgomery, G. W. P.; Adam Drysdale, G. C.; James Guy, P. G. W. A.; Harry H. Hughes, P. G. W. A.

Miss Catalanotti Becomes Bride of James Sabatini

The wedding of Miss Antoinette Catalanotti, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luigi Catalanotti, 28 Fourth avenue; and James Sabatini, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Sabatini, Magnolia Road, took place this morning at 11 o'clock in St. Ann's Catholic Church, with the Rev. Marcelino Romagnolo, officiating. Miss Frances Tamburello, Dorance street, played the wedding march.

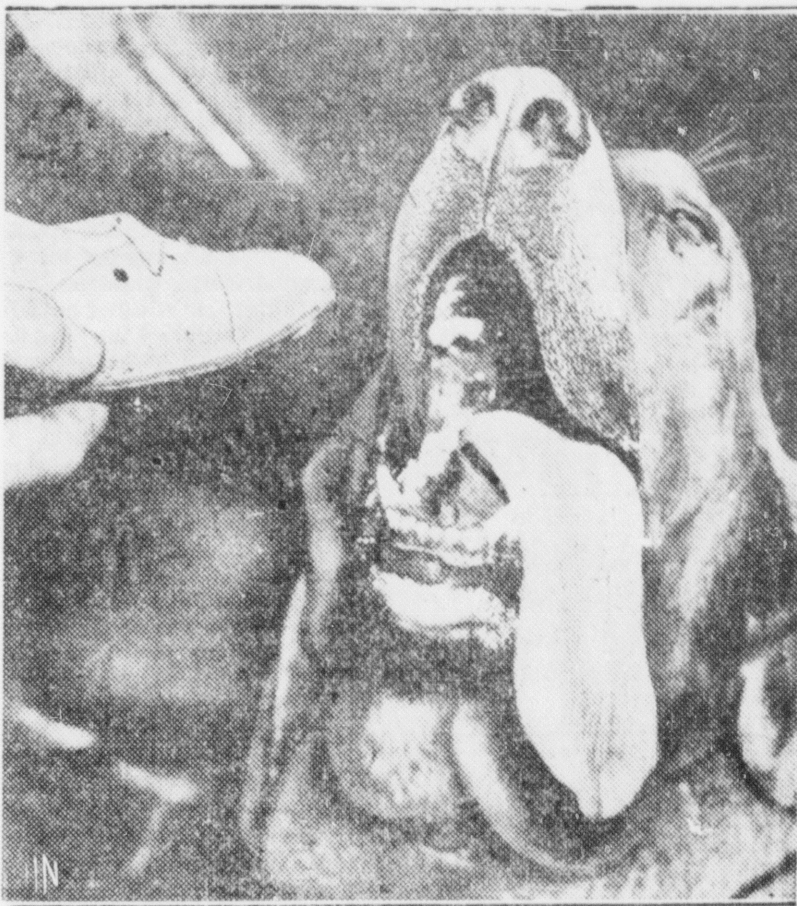

The maid of honor was Miss Angela Catalanotti, sister of the bride; and the bridesmaid was Miss Ida Sabatini, sister of the groom. The best man was Edward Catalanotti, brother of the bride.

The bride was gowned in white chiffon, a cluster of pearls trimming the neckline. The long sleeves were made of lace and chiffon, puffed from the shoulder to the elbow. The long skirt featured a train with insets of lace. The bride's veil of tulle edged with lace, had a tulle headpiece with a crown of orange blossoms and pearls. Her slippers were white satin, and she carried calla lilies.

The maid of honor was attractive in a light blue silk organdie gown over blue tulle. The sleeves were short and puffed, and the skirt was ankle length. A cluster of artificial pink and blue flowers were worn at the neckline, and an organdie girdle with a bow in back, finished the waistline. Blue linen slippers, a crown-shaped tulle headpiece with face veil of the same tone, completed her outfit and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and delphinium, tied with a blue bow. The bridesmaid, Miss Sabatini, was attired in a gown fashioned like the one worn by Miss Catalanotti, but of pink silk organdie over tulle, with accessories of the same tone. Her bouquet was composed of pink roses tied with a pink bow.

After the ceremony, a dinner was served at the home of the bride for the bridal party and immediate families. At six o'clock this evening, a reception will be held at the bride's home for relatives and a few friends. Mr. and Mrs. Sabatini will leave this evening for Atlantic City, N. J., where they will spend a week. The bride travelled in a sport dress, in natural tone background with maroon and brown flowered design. She wore white slippers, an off-the-face model felt hat, jigger coat, gloves and bag of white.

Bloodhound Gets Kidnap Scent

In an effort to trace the missing Mrs. Alice Parsons, kidnaped from her Stony Brook, L. I., estate, bloodhounds were brought into the vigorous eight-state hunt. One of the dogs is shown being given the scent.

LEGION JUNIOR NINE TO OPEN SEASON HERE TODAY

Will Unfurl Pennant at Game This Afternoon On Leedom's Field

CADETS TO GIVE DRILL FOR THE LAST PERIOD

The Bristol American Legion Junior baseball nine opens the home season today when the local team will meet Quakertown here on the Landroth field at three o'clock.

An interesting opening program has been arranged for the occasion and it is expected there will be a large crowd on hand to witness the game.

The American Legion Cadets will parade and give an exhibition drill at the field and the ninth district pennant captured by the Bristol team last year will be unfurled with proper and fitting ceremonies. William Griffith, commander of Bracken Post, will unfurl the flag.

The Bristol team will appear in new uniforms and a fast game is anticipated. Both Bristol and Quakertown have each lost a game and both groups are out to keep their records as clean as possible.

It is thought that Bristol has a good chance to again capture the Bucks County crown of the Junior Baseball League, and the support of the public is urged on the part of those sponsoring their boy activity.

Manager Hems has chosen as his battery for today, Karl Leinheiser on the mound and Barney Ludwig at the receiving end.

Last Sunday Bristol defeated Doylestown at Edgely by the score of 4 to 0. Vance Betz was on the mound and was invincible, allowing only three hits. He had seven strike-outs to his credit.

Plans Outdoor Service For Neshaminy Church

The historic Neshaminy Warwick Presbyterian Church, known as the "Log College Church," founded by William Tennent in 1726, has completed arrangements for a unique outdoor Sunday evening worship service throughout the Summer weeks beginning tomorrow.

Prominent guest speakers, special music provided by the choir of co-operating churches and leadership in devotions by their pastors will characterize the simple service.

Rev. W. Sherman Skinner, new minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Germantown, will be the first speaker.

On June 20 the guest speaker will be Rev. William Hiram Poulkes, recently elected at Columbus, Ohio, moderator of the general assembly; Rev. Dr. John A. Mackay, new president of Princeton Theological Seminary; Rev. Dr. Frederick W. Loetscher, Rev. Dr. Robert B. Whyte, Rev. Dr. John Ernest Mertz and others will speak on successive Sundays.

Rev. Ernest vandenBosch, of Hartsdale, is pastor of the old Neshaminy Warwick Church.

Flames Early Today Destroy 350 Chickens

Fire this morning killed 350 chickens and destroyed a garage converted into a chicken house on the property of Earl Jackson, Durham Road, just beyond Laurel Bend. Bristol Consolidated firemen were called at one o'clock and protected the house, which was near the burning structure.

The barking of the Jackson dog aroused Mr. Jackson, who looking out of his bedroom window saw the chicken house burning. He drove to Bristol and notified the firemen, who immediately responded.

There were 250 laying hens and 100 chicks housed in batteries. It is presumed that the flames were started by an oil burner.

The building and contents were insured.

TWO ARE BURNED IN SERIES OF CRASHES OCCURRING ON THE EDISON S-CURVE NEAR DOYLESTOWN; FOUR AUTOMOBILES IN MISHAPS

DOYLESTOWN, June 12.—Four persons narrowly escaped with their lives yesterday in two hair-raising accidents within 100 feet of each other on the curve at Edison which will be eliminated when repairs now under way are completed and a new bridge built.

A truck and a passenger sedan literally were burned to cinders in the adjacent mishap. On the lower end of the highway and on Old York road, two other trucks also involved in accidents, making it "mishap day" on the paved stretch.

The first accident occurred when a truck driven by Darwin Hulbert, 21, of Rome, N. Y., ran off the curve at Edison, catapulted over an embankment and burst into flames.

Hulbert and his helper, Stanley Terry, also of Rome, were trapped in the cab, but managed to escape with burns and lacerations. The truck was totally destroyed. Both were detained at Doylestown Hospital.

While Highway Patrolman Rentz was cleaning up the details of that one mishap, the car driven by Mrs. Minna E. Warrick, 46, of East Stroudsburg, skidded on another section of the curve, 100 yards further south, sideswiped the car driven by Rev. Roland M. Wendell, of Sidney, N. Y., left the roadway and overturned.

Despair of Wife's Return

Stony Brook, N. Y., June 12.—As the dead-line for payment of $25,000 ransom slipped hourly farther into the past, William H. Parsons, husband of the missing Mrs. Alice McDonnell Parsons, today was reported despairing of her safe return.

Wealthy relatives of the socially prominent Long Island matron who was kidnaped last Wednesday, meanwhile, sought to make contact with her abductors.

Federal, state, county and local police began an intensive man-hunt. While automobiles raced in and out of the Parsons "gold coast" estate here, a man identified by authorities as Alex Kupinoff, described as a Long Island City match factory worker, was taken into custody in Brooklyn.

According to police, he was married in 1930 to Anna Kupynova, housekeeper at the Parsons home. No charge was placed against him.

TWO COMMENCEMENTS PLANNED FOR TOMORROW

18 to Graduate from St. Ann's; 11 from St. Charles' 8th Grade

AWARDS TO BE MADE

Diplomas will be presented to 18 students of St. Ann's Commercial School, Logan street, and certificates of promotion to high school will be awarded to 11 students of the eighth grade of St. Charles' Parochial School, Cornwells Heights, tomorrow.

The St. Ann's commencement is to be held at seven o'clock tomorrow evening in St. Ann's auditorium, Logan street. At that time American Legion medals will be presented to two students by Mrs. Jacob C. Schmidt, Jr., and William Griffith, representing the Auxiliary and the Bracken Post. In attendance will be the Regio Consul and his wife, as well as Dr. Zerquenie. Various awards will be made; and the commercial students will present a play, "Queen By the Grace of God."

The exercises in St. Charles' auditorium, Bristol Pike, Cornwells Heights, will be conducted at 2.30 p. m. tomorrow. Seven girls and four boys will be graduated from the eighth grade.

The Rev. Father Francis J. Flood, rector of St. Charles' parish, will speak; and American Legion medals will be bestowed upon a girl and a boy by Mrs. Arthur F. Zug and Dr. J. Fred Wagner. Chorus numbers and recitations will be given by the pupils; and prizes for outstanding work will be awarded.

also of the Doylestown sub-station, came upon that one.

"I warned everyone at the scene that free gasoline had trickled from the fuel tank," Gallagher said, "and I was questioning Mrs. Warrick—when 'wham,' the whole works went up in flame. Someone apparently tossed a match or lighted cigarette away, and set fire to both the machine and the apron of the highway for a distance of 20 or 30 feet."

Mrs. Warrick, fortunately, had climbed through a window with her

PRESENTS FLAG TO SCOUTS AS GIFT FROM ELKS' LODGE

Ceremony Takes Place On Lawn in Rear of The Elks' Home

J. L. KILCOYNE SPEAKS

Newportville Boy Scout Troop No. 1 last night was presented with a handsome American flag mounted on a staff by Bristol Lodge of Elks. The presentation was made on the lawn of the Elks Home here and was the annual Flag Day observance by the Elks.

The members of the Scout Troop stood at attention during the presentation while members of the Elks were on one of the large porches.

The ritualistic service of the Elks pertaining to Flag Day was read by Jacob C. Schmidt, Jr., chairman of the Flag Day committee of the lodge. Mr. Schmidt introduced J. Leslie Kilcoyne, well known Bristol attorney and a past exalted ruler of the Elks.

Mr. Kilcoyne made a brief but very patriotic appeal to the scouts to support the flag and honor it.

"Boys!

"To a soldier his flag is his guiding star from the time he puts on the uniform until it is wrapped about him after death. It is his inseparable companion, whether it flies from the staff of the army, the navy or the marines. He has the highest respect and love for it," said the speaker.

Then continuing Mr. Kilcoyne told the scouts how the flag is the emblem of America, the land of the free and the home of the brave. How it represents opportunity for all.

"The lodge of Elks has as its cornerstone 'Americanism,'" said the speaker. "It teaches love of country and love for the flag and all that it stands for."

Mr. Kilcoyne then dwelt at length urging the boys to love, honor and protect the flag.

Herbert Brambley, chairman of the Newportville scout committee, accepted the flag with a few appropriate remarks stating that he trusted that the flag would mean much to the boys as they developed under the leadership of the scout committee.

Install Officers For Court Bristol, C. D. of A.

Court Bristol, No. 1097, Catholic Daughters of America, held its business meeting in the K. of C. Home, Thursday evening.

Installation of the following officers took place: Grand regent, Mrs. Andrew Moore; vice regent, Miss Julia McFadden; prophetess, Miss Margaret Roarty; treasurer, Miss Mary K. McFadden; financial secretary, Miss Mary Roarty; lecturer, Mrs. Neil McVaine; monitor, Mrs. Joseph Foster; historian, Mrs. Clarence Wilson; organist, Miss Gertrude Roche; trustees, Mrs. Katherine Lynn and Mrs. Edward McVaine.

Mrs. Laura Molter, Philadelphia, district deputy, officiated. Plans for the annual communion and breakfast on June 20th, were completed during the evening. This being a catered affair, all members who wish to make reservation are asked to do so by Tuesday evening. Unforeseen reasons necessitated the postponement of the rummage sale, scheduled for yesterday and today, until next Friday and Saturday. There will be no social meeting in June.

Mrs. Andrew Moore, grand regent, who represented Court Bristol at the state convention recently in Reading, gave an interesting report on the activities of the Catholic Daughters. Refreshments were served to 70.

BRISTOL RESIDENTS VOTED FOR PUBLIC SCHOOL DURING 1834

Same Year in Which Penna. Established System of Public Schools

TOLD OF IN AN ESSAY

Address Given by Harry Bauroth, Jr., in Commencement Project

"Development of Education in Bristol" was the title of the phase of the commencement project handled by Harry Bauroth, Jr., at the graduation exercises of Bristol high school in the Grand Theatre, Tuesday evening.

The general theme of the project was "Development of Secondary Education in Our State and Town." The address of Mr. Bauroth follows: "DEVELOPMENT OF EDUCATION IN BRISTOL"

In 1834, the same year in which Pennsylvania established a system of public schools, the people of Bristol voted to have a public school for the children of their town. There is no exact record of where this school was held, although, we believe the sessions were conducted in a private building. It was not until 3 years later, March, 1837, that the School Board suggested raising the tax to cover the expense of constructing a regular school building.

Next December we shall celebrate the one-hundredth anniversary of the birth of the public school system in Bristol. For on December 12, 1837, the old Wood Street school building was completed and occupied by classes. At this time there was an enrollment of ninety-five boys and ninety girls. In the following few weeks these numbers were increased to one hundred and twenty-six boys and one hundred and twenty girls.

Classes were taught in Orthography, Reading, Penmanship, English Grammar, Geography, Composition, History, Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, Arithmetic, Algebra, Geometry, Mensuration, Trigonometry and Surveying. The school books were purchased by the school board and sold to the scholars.

Sixteen years later, in 1853, the school house on Wood street proved inadequate to accommodate the children of the town; measures were then taken to provide for another building. The result was the erection of the Otter street school. Likewise, for similar reasons, in 1878 the Washington street building was erected and in 1881 the Bath street school. The Jefferson avenue structure was formally opened in 1909.

However, previous to 1893 there was no separate high school building. As far back as 1850 high school classes were conducted in the Wood street building. A regular academic course was offered including Arithmetic, History, Algebra, Latin, German and the other subjects taught in the school today.

In 1893 the school board adopted a resolution and appointed a committee to investigate the expediency of increasing the school accommodations and to take preliminary steps, if thought advisable, to erect a suitable high school building at the corner of Wood and Mulberry streets. The committee reported that in their judgment the time had come to build a new school house for the accommodation of the high school and grammar grades, and that a building be erected and made ready for occupancy by September, 1894. On November 10, of that year, the building, was formally dedicated. The total cost of this structure exceeded twenty thousand dollars.

In 1911 therefore the town had four school buildings which were on Washington street, Bath street, Jefferson avenue and Wood street. The old building on Wood street and the Otter street school were not used at this time.

In June, 1909, a course in stenography and typewriting was introduced into the high school curriculum. In September, 1910, a full commercial course was installed. Music had been taught in the schools for several years before.

In 1921 the need for a larger school was presented when the Harriman section was added to Bristol Borough. The school board therefore purchased from the government through Mr. Grundy the older portion of the present high school. In 1924 one section of the basement was used for manual training. On the first floor there was a combined gymnasium and auditorium. The remainder of the building was divided into classrooms with the exception of one room which was the library.

In 1926 largely due to the combined efforts of the Mother's and Father's Associations, the new wing was erected. A new library and classrooms were built above the auditorium as they were needed.

Although no official action has been taken, the school board is now considering a project to build on to this new wing. A larger and more modern library would be installed on the top floor, while new boys' and girls' locker rooms would occupy the basement.

Soon after the new wing was occupied, in 1926, a General Course was added to the curriculum to give stu-

JULY FOURTH DANGERS

July 4 soon will be here.
It might be well for the general public to give a little thought beforehand to the dangers and perils liable to be encountered on that day, and determine to observe safety-first precautions.

Unless a large number of lives are lost through accidents on the Fourth, the holiday observance this year will be much different from those of the past. It was not so many years ago, that discussion of a "safe and sane" Fourth dealt largely with the use of firecrackers and firearms in celebrating the day. Much wider territory now is included.

Each July 4 sees lives sacrificed in the air, on land and in the water. A tremendous variety of direct causes may be involved, but behind all these as a background is that of carelessness or recklessness. Even persons usually careful where their own safety or the safety of others is at stake often are inclined to let down a little under the stimulus of the holiday spirit. Either their own life or that of someone else may be the penalty.

Many children would be saved from death on the Fourth if their parents displayed a little more diligence and effort in seeing that proper safeguards surrounded them in their holiday pursuits.

The perils of crowded highways are too well known to need to be emphasized.

If everyone would make it a special point on July 4 to observe carefully the fundamental rules of safety generally, the toll of life taken on that day would be greatly reduced.

NO SELF-MADE MEN

There are no self-made men. People are made by people, by instances, by circumstances and grasped opportunities.

Everything that is helpful, inspiring, interesting does something to make a man.

Everything with which we come in contact each day does something to make us what we are. We owe a debt of gratitude to every human being, to every flower that grows, to every tree, to every rock, to every song sparrow from the glorious throat of every bird. Wherever beauty is, there is a contribution to all that we are.

We can put our fingers on no single thing and say that it made us. Surely we cannot say that we made ourselves what we are.

The greatest man is he who gives the greatest amount of credit to others for what success he has achieved.

There is no finer character in this world than the appreciative man or woman.

Keep giving credit if you would be happy and grow.

A man shrinks the moment he throws out his chest and says: "See what I have done!" He should say: "See what others have done!"

No matter how resourceful, energetic and successful you may be, you are not self-made, but other-made!

That economist who says there is no overproduction of anything hasn't noticed the supply of Napoleons.

The more we observe the noble warriors in Spain, the more we can't understand what they are making the world safe for.

Why feel like a nobody when you can feel important merely by taking out a pencil and using the tablecloth as a scratch pad?

CHILDREN WILL HOLD SWAY IN THE CHURCHES

Special Children's Day Exercises Arranged in Bristol Edifices

M A N Y RECITATIONS

Harrison M. E. Church

Announcements for Sunday and the week following: 10 a. m., Sunday School regular session; Sunday morning worship service: 11, sermon, "Took Counsel Against Him" (sermon series from Mark); Children's Day Baptisms: 7:30 p. m., special Children's Day service, special program by children and instrumental music, guest speaker, the Rev. Dr. Howard E. Hand, district superintendent; mid-week prayer meeting, 8 p. m., the Rev. John A. McKelroy, minister.

The service is taken from the teachings of the Bible. The program is divided into four sections. Mrs. Vasey's class of girls will tell about the Baby Jesus; Mrs. A. Roger's class of boys will tell about the Boy Jesus; some of the things Jesus taught and did as a man will be brought from Mr. Peter's class, Mrs. Tomlinson's class, and Miss Anderson's class; the last section entitled "Jesus, Our Friend," contains a brief scene acted by pupils of two classes. Miss Minnie VanSoest's and Miss Ruth Hart's classes will help in the staging. Special instrumental music is being arranged.

Bristol Presbyterian Church

The services at Bristol Presbyterian Church for tomorrow will be: 9:45 a. m., Church School, under leadership of Dr. John J. Hargrave, superintendent; 11 a. m., sermon by the Rev. Herman A. Maser, D. D., Philadelphia, subject: "Spiritual Training"; Senior Christian Endeavor, seven p. m.

NEWCASTLE, Wyo.—(INS)—When he retires in the near future after a quarter century of medical practice, Dr. N. E. Wells will leave behind him more than $17,000 in cancelled debts due him personally for professional services.

Dr. Wells, who has been county health officer here for the past two years, said he was retiring because he could no longer stand the "work and worry."

PAY DISCRIMINATION

ODESSA, Wash.—(INS)—When mules got a pay raise but men didn't, WPA workers staged a brief strike here. Later they decided to return to work at their former wages, despite the fact the pay of mule teams was upped from $2.50 to $3.50 daily.

"Oh, and can I have a party an' everything?"

"Yes—Papa's saving every month so that we can have a home real soon—just like the house that Jack built." There's no quicker way to have the home you've always wanted than to invest a little regularly for a "Home Purchase Fund." It's lots of fun and mighty profitable, too, when you select this association's tested, liberal dividend plan.

CHAPTER XXXIV

The young Dexters returned to town in December. Rose and Jonathan went to their first party. Phil was unchanged, wise-cracking, dark, complacent and Sally was like a yellow flame, talking too much, laughing too loudly, very comic about travel and people and being a bride. She was tremendously friendly toward them both, she'd brought some tortoise-shell combs to Rosa from Italy and a cigarette case for Jonathan. But somehow she was no longer Sally Sutton, she was Mrs. Phil Dexter.

Larry was at the party. He avoided them both. He drank too much and had to be taken up to bed during the evening. It was an unfortunate episode.

Rose looked after his undignified exit with darkening eyes. She was troubled about Larry. She had kept this from Jonathan. She knew what Jonathan would say, and he was right. But she had no proof . . . no actual proof. He was a disturbance in not her class alone, but all his classes. He was a leader of the most undesirable element in the school. Worse than that, most of the younger boys made a hero of him. He broke training deliberately, yet he remained on the football team, playing an erratic and reckless game, spectacular with victory.

There was a new club among the older boys, and Rose knew it. It was purely and simply a gambling club. She knew who the ring-leader was but she had no actual evidence. She couldn't ask the other boys to "sneak" even if they would.

The mid-term examinations came and went, after they were over Rose went to see Mr. Martin in his office. She shut the door and he looked up in some astonishment.

"I had to see you."

"Well?" he asked testily. He knew that she was to be married after the close of school. It annoyed him. Why any woman with a good position should prefer marriage. He was a bachelor and gloried in it.

"It's about Larry Dexter."

"Well, what about him?"

"I'm flunking him," she said.

"Flunking . . . I bet—"

"Yes I know. She looked at him as she stood there by the desk, at his disagreeable pinched face with its expression of amazement. "Yes, his paper was quite correct. Too correct. He cheated. I know. He knew all the answers. He couldn't help but know them. He had them with him. Oh, no doubt in his head for the most part. You see, the questions disappeared from my room. I had left them carelessly in my desk, a day or so before. They were returned however."

Martin's face lighted. He said, "Rose, you are making a very serious accusation. You can't do this. You have no proof that it was Dexter."

"I have some very clear fingerprints."

He looked at her in horror. "But," he said, "this isn't a police station or a detective story."

"I appreciate that," said Rose, "but the fact remains. I can't flunk Larry Dexter. And moreover, I believe he should be expelled. For cheating. For stealing. For lying. For undermining discipline in class. For gambling."

Martin's face was white. He said, "You don't know what you're doing."

"Oh, yes," said Rose. "I know, well enough."

He ordered, after a silence, "You'll pass Larry Dexter, and there will not be a word of this."

"You can't dismiss me, Mr. Martin. You'll have to prefer charges if you contemplate that. What charges can you prefer? And if you don't do something about Larry Dexter, I shall force a board meeting. I'll—I have a good deal of influence. Enough to push this thing through."

He said, shouting at her, "If you dare . . . you'll be sorry. . . ."
Rose walked away from the desk. She said, "I'll dare all right, and I won't be sorry." She turned at the door and looked at him levelly. "It's time that this school was under a more competent rule than the Sutton-Dexter combination," she said, "and that a Dexter found himself something less than sacrosanct. I'm not the only one who feels this way."

The door closed after her. Martin picked up the telephone. Presently he was connected with the Sutton house. Sweat stood out on his forehead despite the snow lying white on the ground outside. He said, "Senator Sutton . . . ? This is Martin speaking. Could I see you for a moment on urgent business?"

Hanging up after a satisfactory answer, he wiped his forehead. He took up his coat and hat. One of them must go, the boy or Rose Ward. He knew it would not be the boy.

Rose was telling her troubles to no one, not even to Jonathan. She had discovered that while young Doctor Kimber was slow to anger, once aroused he was difficult to pacify. She had a vision of him storming at Martin in his office, and shuddered. No, this was her affair and she would see it through.

Her next step of course would be to go over Martin's stubborn head and see Rogers, the superintendent, which would be, she conceded, an almost hopeless proposition, as Rogers was in Sutton's pocket. Rose set her strong little jaw, deceptively masked in soft, feminine flesh. One way or another she would get action, she determined.

She spoke tentatively to Lucy Anderson, the school nurse with whom she had been friends since her childhood. Lucy was of the school, yet she was sufficiently detached. Lucy listened, frowning. Eventually she said soberly, "You can't beat 'em, Rose; there's no use running your head against a stone wall. The best thing you can do is quit and keep on lowering his marks. After all you'll be leaving at the end of the school year. Now don't, for heaven's sake, tell me it's the principle of the thing. . . . I'll scream if you do."

Rose said, after a moment, "That's all very well. And it is the principle of the thing. It's a long time from now till June. He can do a lot of damage before then. And besides. . . ." She sighed, shrugged her shoulders. "I can lower his marks till kingdom come," she said, "and it won't do any good. I know."

"Well, it's your own business. Personally I don't know what I'd do in your shoes. I have the courage, I suppose," Lucy told her.

Bearing the superintendent in his den was almost literally that, for Mr. Rogers had the finest Van Dyke in the north country and gave it the fond care one would bestow upon a beloved child. He was not overcome with delight to see Rose, and indeed it took her some time to reach him, as he appeared remarkably busy all of a sudden and quite unable to make appointments.

Finally she went to his house one evening after supper and was welcomed there by his wife, a pleasant plump little person who drew her within and informed her husband of her arrival. There was nothing for Rogers to do but receive her in a singularly morbid looking den, decorated with all the ancestral chromos and left-over Mission furniture which had been accumulating for the past thirty years.

It was evident to Rose that Martin had already seen his superintendent. Rogers was pleasant enough, but his manner was the tactful, tolerant attitude of an experienced man dealing with the whims and crochets of frail femininity. He agreed with her that Larry Dexter's marks had not been of the best and that Larry was perhaps a "little wild." "But," he added, pontifically, placing the tips of his fingers exactly together, leaning back in his chair and regarding Rose through his thick lenses, "we must make allowances for youth. I am sure you will not be too hasty. Miss Ward, I will have Mr. Martin speak to the boy. A little closer application to his work—and I am convinced his work will be brought up to standard. I appreciate your deep interest in the school and your classes, but, if you will forgive me, you are very young and—"

"You mean," interrupted Rose, "that I am young and that Mr. Dexter, and more especially his friend, Senator Sutton, are very influential."

"I wouldn't put it quite like that," breathed the pleasant superintendent in silky tones. "Of course we feel that it has been rather a feather in our scholastic cap that Mr. Dexter brought his son back to Riverport and placed him in one of our schools."

Rose was exasperated past all caution. She got to her feet and looked down at the gentleman. "He was expelled from his last preparatory school, Mr. Rogers," she reminded him.

"Quite," agreed Rogers, unmoved and unmoving. "Mr. Dexter spoke to both Mr. Martin and myself about that. A mere boyish prank. Of course many of these fashionable preparatory schools permit their students entirely too much freedom, removed as they are from the steady influence of their families. It is bound to go to their heads."

He indicated that the interview was over. Rose went out into the breathlessly cold night. She had done all she could. She had flunked young Mr. Dexter, she had seen his principal and the superintendent of the school and so young Mr. Dexter would go merrily on his way and graduate with his class in June. That was that. She had been told to lay off, virtually. If she laid off she would finish out her school year, and be married. When the contracts came through she would not sign, as she was going to resign. Perhaps it would be just as well to let sleeping dogs lie.

Larry would be leaving at the end of the school year. He would not, she reflected, get into college. It would take a tutoring school to drag him in by the heels. But at least he would be graduated.

Why not wash her hands of the matter? Once he left school things would quiet down, by as they had been before.

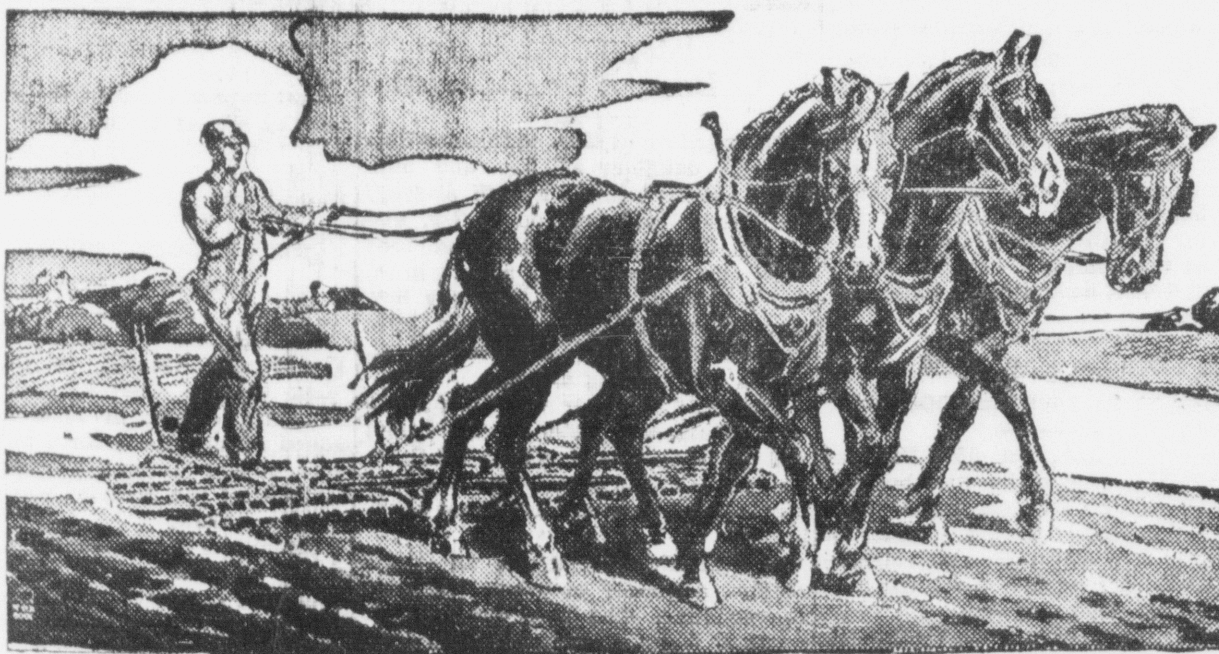

But would they be? Would not the influence linger among the boys and yes, the girls, too—now so patently impressed by him? There were boys in the Junior classes, and in the lower classes as well who were flattered and proud of being a part of Larry's special "gang." If they saw him slide through school without working, if they saw him get away with the things he was doing, without reprimand or punishment, might that not influence their own remaining school years, if not their entire lives?

Rose told herself: you're taking this too seriously—just because a boy drinks and gambles and shirks his work, just because a boy is idle and foul-mouthed and completely good-for-nothing, is that any reason why you should imagine a group of similar boys, following in his footsteps because they think that he's smart, and that they'd be smart too—because he's set a new student fashion?

She reached her house, rosy, breathing fast from the pace she had set herself. Her eyes were so dark with anger they were almost black. On the steps she paused to look up at the sky . . . it crackled with Northern lights.

GRADUATION

Music and flowers and pretty gowns. So sweet, so young and gay. Speeches and fine, new suits and ties—Diplomas, medals, play!

Each year the same, yet ever fresh. For June is sweet and young. Class songs are always, always new. Though they be often sung.

For every June the faces change. The dancing feet move swiftly by. To take their place in life's parade—Even as you and I!

Mothers and fathers, neighbors, friends, Smile as they joyful go. And send a prayer, a fervent prayer That each the given road may know.

"Let them not squander all this wealth, Nor waste this beauty, fresh and sweet. Nor spend their strength on useless tasks. Nor fail, nor meet with grim defeat.

"Hold high those golden heads, and brown. Keep bright those eyes so young and clear. Let them march onward to each goal Without one vain regret or tear.

"And of this night let each preserve Its sweetness in their heart like dew. Remembered as they older grow—Music and flowers, and life all new!"

—GRETA DRUMM.

Industrial Arts will be.

Although the Bristol Schools were represented by athletic teams before, supervised athletics did not begin until 1921. Since that time, football, basketball, baseball and track have been held regularly. Now we have teams representing our school in the wrestling ring and on the gymnasium apparatus.

Many people today think of extra-curricular activities as a waste of time. This is not so. Clubs and organizations are formed as they are needed. Near the beginning of the century the students had a social and literary club called the Swastika Society. In 1919 the Girl Reserve was formed. This activity has very ably carried on and is now one of the four service organizations in the school, the others of which are the Student Council formed in 1921, the Traffic Club in 1927 (or 1928), and the Hi-Y in 1933.

Within the last few years such organizations as the Dramatic Club, the Library, French, Latin, Commercial, and Hobby Clubs have been formed. For a few years the school issued a paper, the Bolt. This was changed to the Rambler, a 48 page magazine, which was later followed by the present Rambler, a four page newspaper that is issued bi-monthly.

It has been interesting to trace the development of the Bristol schools through the first century they have been conducted. What will the future be? That will be determined by our citizens, you and me.

"RUBBER" GAME OF SERIES PLAYED HERE TOMORROW

The "rubber" game of a three-game series between the Landreth Seeds nine and Wissinoming of the Quaker City League will be played tomorrow afternoon on the Landreth ball field. The largest crowd of the season is expected to see the two rival clubs battle it out for diamond supremacy.

In the second tilt of the season, the Landrethmen stopped the Wissies, but Harry Wood's boys came back strong two weeks ago and handed the Blue and Gold a severe 13-5 lacing. The Wissies hit the ball all over the lot in this game and Ben Emory made five consecutive hits.

Wednesday night, the Landreth team dropped a 10-7 game to the Media team of the Main Line League. Four runs in the ninth inning gave the visitors the triumph after the localites held the lead from the start. However, the Landreth players socked the pill hard all during the tilt and Frankie Griggs was robbed out of a home run by a catch in centerfield.

Manager Dave Landreth is undecided as to whom he will start against the Wissies. Indications point to Lonny Heiser or Howard Black. Ashby pitched the game against the Media club.

Jack Broderick will do the receiving, with Griggs, Liberatore, Debokey and Dougherty filling the infield. The outfield will be covered by Purcell, Harwi and Rockhill.

Game will start at three o'clock sharp.

ODD FELLOWS LOSE AFTER 6 STRAIGHT WINS

The Odd Fellows' drive to capture the first half championship of the Bristol Twilight League came to an abrupt end last night on Leedom's field as the Hibernians defeated the Suttonmen, 8-5, before a large crowd.

Six straight triumphs was the record set by the Oddies before their streak was broken last night. From a tail-ender, the Odd Fellows team had worked itself to a contender for the first half crown but last night's defeat threw a wrench into the machinery which was oiled for the crown.

The Hibernians now hold first place with seven wins and but one defeat but the Oddies come next in line with the same number of victories but three defeats. The Hiboes have eight more games of the first half to play while the Odd Fellows have three.

It was the third consecutive mound win for the portside "Eddie" Sullivan. Sullivan was socked hard last night towards the close of the battle and when the Oddies put on a last inning spurt, Manager Lawrence Delaney had a relief hurler warming up. Sullivan was nicked for ten hits, six coming in the last two innings. He blanked the Radcliffe street boys for the first four cantoes.

CONNOR SIGNS TO RACE AT LANGHORNE EVENT

"Another 'first ten' finisher in the recent 500-mile Indianapolis classic was added to the field in the Langhorne Speedway automobile races, Saturday, June 19th, with the signing today of George Connor of San Bernardino, Cal., who placed ninth.

Connor blazed his way around the huge Hoosier speedway for the entire 500 miles, recording an average speed of slightly over 103 miles an hour for the full route. He was one of the few who drove the entire distance under the scorching sun, which wilted many starters and caused them to call upon relief drivers to finish.

His performance marked the second time in as many years that he finished among the "first ten." Last year he placed tenth. He also distinguished himself last season by turning in one of the best exhibitions of the American entrants in the Roosevelt Raceway event, pushing the foreign stars for 73 laps before motor trouble forced him out.

Connor broke into racing on the Pacific Coast, receiving sound early training which has turned him into one of the nation's foremost dirt track, as well as speedway, jockeys. His appearance here may mark his only race on a mile course in the East this season.

In addition to Connor, a large number of Indianapolis headliners will compete. Ted Horn, colorful Coast star, who placed third this year and second last year in the Hoosier event, is one of the other early entrants. Still other 1937 "first ten" finishers will compete, according to Ralph A. Hankinson, who is completing negotiations for their appearance.

Mauri Rose, national automobile racing champion, who finished second at Indianapolis in 1935, is already entered. The Jewish star was halted in his efforts to continue his winning in the 500-mile race this year when his motor failed him after he had driven 300 miles.

Sues To Recover Loan Made To Man Condemned To Die

A Bucks county man, Andrew L. Phillips, Upper Makefield Township, has entered suit against a man condemned to die, according to records on file at Trenton, N. J.

Ramon Cota, convicted wife murderer, is named defendant in a Chancery Court foreclosure proceeding involving his 638 Norway avenue property in Hamilton Township, N. J.

The complainant is Andrew L. Phillips, Upper Makefield township, Bucks county, who sued to recover $800 lent Cota and his late wife, Mrs. Emilie Riedel Cota, in November, 1935. Phillips contended interest amounting to $24 became due and was unpaid May 22nd.

Cota is now in the State Prison death house, Trenton, N. J., upon conviction of the hammer murder of his wife at the Norway avenue home.

Army's "Outstanding Athlete"

Feature at West Point Military Academy graduation was the athletic review, during which outstanding athletes of the academy were given awards for pre-eminence. Here, Charles "Monk" Meyer, sparkplug of the Army grid team for the past three years, is given a saber as the best all-round athlete, by Superintendent William B. Connor.

LEIGHTON ANXIOUS TO DEFEAT JOE MARCHIONE

Desirous of a bout with Louis Spino, William "Hokey" Leighton, Rescue Squad amateur boxer, will do his utmost to emerge victorious in his bout with Joseph Marchione, Pen Mar, Monday night, in the St. Ann's arena. The bouts are sponsored by the St. Ann's Athletic Association with the sanction of the Middle Atlantic district of the A. A. U.

Leighton was kayoed by Spino last season and likes to have another crack at the Arena A. A. warrior. But to receive this he must beat Marchione. He has already won three straight, having beaten his foes in his last three bouts, including the double victory he scored last Monday night. Spino is also scheduled to fight Monday night, meeting Bennie Arrizzi, Seymour.

Fans of this vicinity will have an opportunity of seeing another boy break in when Tony Pete, who recently joined the St. Ann's stable of boxers, meets Roy Sutton, Pen Mar. It will be a novice bout in the 135-pound class. Pete has looked well in the training sessions and feels confident of starting with a win.

Match-maker Sammy Moffo has arranged for one heavyweight bout, it being between Nathaniel Hines, Arena, and Willie Collins, East Side. Hines has fought here on several occasions and last week gave a wonderful exhibition, winning when his opponent received a bad cut over his left eye.

Tickets are now on sale at the St. Ann's clubhouse and reservations can be had by telephoning 9934. There are still plenty of choice seats remaining, and the fans are urged to do their ordering now so as not to be disappointed for good seats.

Two Burned in Series of Crashes Near Doylestown

son, Howard, 13, after the accident. Both escaped injury. The Doylestown Fire Company, which had just put out one highway blaze, returned to duty to extinguish the second. Gallagher fought the fire with his hand extinguisher until the firemen's arrival.

Not much later, a heavy truck left the road near the Bucks County Home, when a front wheel locked. The truck was undamaged, and was backed onto the road without assistance.

The final accident occurred on York road, near W. Church road, in Cheltenham township, when the front wheel locked on a truck laden with carboys of acid, driven by George Fahr, 35, of Phillipsburg. The vehicle plunged off the highway, striking a tree and a pole before it finally stopped.

The acid pouring from the carboys caused a huge volume of smoke, which other motorists at first believed was caused by fire. Fahr was treated at Abington Memorial Hospital for several lacerations of the chin.
